Chairman's Report

Chairman Mark Stephens reported that he met with a local legislator about assisting students who drop out of high school, where he described the concept to bring a cohort of students together to earn both a high school diploma and an associate degree in five years. Although planning is ongoing and the Chairman is leaving the details up to educational experts at the College, the legislator was receptive.

Mr. Stephens firmly believes that it is the College's duty to serve the educational needs of all individuals in the district, and that community colleges have the flexibility to make a bold move to help its residents. He plans to be in further dialog on this issue with President Moore before the end of the year.
